I'd like to express my support of the guaranteed income pilot program as it is a step in the right direction to providing a safety net for South City residents in case of emergencies, such as economic downturn and unexpected personal tragedies. Helping working-class families stay in their homes and have some security in their lives is something we should all strive to provide for our residents. South San Francisco does not have to be like other cities where longtime residents live paycheck to paycheck. Approving this pilot program would do a lot of good for folks here.
